

This was a long watch and was hard to stay focused on so I didn't really understand what he was talking about. What I did take from it was that he was very determined to do that one thing he was talking about; the thing where he was trying to become a local reporter so he could go on that one thing with the students. I remember him talking about how his students came up with the best projects he had ever seen and he went to supervisor and he took the advice he gave him. "I know you can do better" I like this saying because it is true, you always can do better than what you've already done. For me, when I'm working on an art project and just want to be done with it, I also put at least a little more effort than what I was doing previously. Sometimes when it looks completed I just turn it in, knowing I always can do better than that, I just don't want to. I think that was the message that stuck out to me the most.
